Speculation Hesitates While Traders Study the Silver Problem.

DVANCES CONFINED MAINLY TO SPECIALTIES

Street Does Not Expect to See Free Coinage Become a Fact

WALL STREET, } SUNDAY, Jan. 18, 1891. peculation has slowed down while traders and investors are studying the silver problem and discussing the chances of the House passing the Free Evidently there is no serious apprehension that the Senate bill in its present form will get upon the statute book. This would appear from the fact that there is as yet no marked discrimination in favor of such issues of bonds as bear interest payable expressly in gold. Nor did yesterday's bank statement give indication of individual hoarding of gold, nor do we learn of special gold accounts being opened with banks, nor of contracts being drawn with specific stipulation that they shall be carried out on a gold basis, and yet it would seem that all these things would be observable if people seriously feared that debtors might soon be legally authorized to compel their creditors to accept money worth 25 per cent less than they expect to receive. The comparative heaviness of silver bullion and of the warehouse certificates for it which the Stock Exchange trades in appears to be due to the same scepticism as to the ultimate fate of the billalthough it may indeed be caused by specula-tors getting a clearer idea of the effect which the substitution of free coinage for enforced government purchases would have on the market for the white metal. Having lost their biggest customer and gold having gone to a premiumas it certainly would in a twinklingthe silver producers would be placed in the position of all other people having a commodity to sell—they would have to take the price made by the equilibrium of supply and demand in the world's market. Stocks, like other things, would of course advance in price in proportion to the depreciation of the ourrency, by which they would be measured, but the "bear point" involved in the possible success of the free coinage struggle is the Cisturbance of the money market, which would be caused by the withholding of the great volume of gold from general circula-gon. The immediate contraction thus caused would make the carrying of stocks a very expensive proceeding until the currency void could be filled up with silver. While the surplus of the banks continues to swell at the present rate, however, traders feel safe enough and they have great faith in their own ability to "out and run" at short warning. Meanwhile the public is holding aloof, and the traders are confining their operations for the most part to the specialties.

Sales at the Board during the week amounted to 1,581,944 shares (silver bullion certificates not included), against 1,314,041 for the previous week,and 742,285 for that ended January 3. Following is a summary of last week's market, with the closing prices of the previous week for comparison :-Sales, Highest Lowest, Fan.17 Jos.10
